THE GAMECOCK

The following lecture was delivered by Mr. John Gordon Hughes, a trustee of the University of South Carolina, and is published in this issue of the Gamecock.

The Honor System and Fraternities

The University of South Carolina is one of the few universities in the South that has a system of fraternities. The system of fraternities is one of the oldest in the country, and it is one that is respected by most students. The fraternities are a way for students to bond with each other and to share in the traditions of the university. The system of fraternities is also a way for students to learn about the history and culture of the university.

The Honor System is another important part of the university. The system of honor is a way for students to uphold the traditions of the university and to maintain a high level of integrity. The system of honor is a way for students to learn about the importance of integrity and to make a promise to uphold the honor of the university.

The Honor System and Fraternities are two important parts of the University of South Carolina. The system of fraternities is one of the oldest in the country, and it is one that is respected by most students. The system of fraternities is also a way for students to bond with each other and to share in the traditions of the university. The system of fraternities is also a way for students to learn about the history and culture of the university.

The Honor System is another important part of the university. The system of honor is a way for students to uphold the traditions of the university and to maintain a high level of integrity. The system of honor is a way for students to learn about the importance of integrity and to make a promise to uphold the honor of the university.