Wake Up, Students
It's too bad you students can't express yourselves strongly on matters that are really your business. Too bad concerted action on the real problems that exist on your campus, you would find them changing under your very eyes. You can't find your intelligence being used at the extent that you will be allowed a certain amount of responsibility. The Gamecock has voiced its objection to the limited cute system for years; but of what avail is it to have a proposal at all meetings, if no action is taken to revive the honor system, and then go off on a crazy tangent and listen to a motion to sl

Joye why don't you wake, students, and get on to the fact that people laugh at fools who go to college and think they are intelligent? Why don't you at least try for your candidate? If you can't decide on a candidate, then you must be too dumb to be in college! Less than half of you are graduated. The college is not entirely pathetic. And the politicians give another chance. Don't know the names of your campus, your year book, your May Queen, your president? The politicians should blame—but you take the rap.

And the spider spins its threadless web.

If you must call student body meetings and go off on tangents, you ought to take at least two sensible ones. Compulsory Chapel, for instance. Way back when Law Wallace was editor of the Gamecock, the paper tried to curb for voluntary Chapel atten dance, and ever since then it has been fighting for its life. There is a chance you might strike or something. But at least you can discuss it at your meet gings. It is a decided forward step, and we don't feel that the loss of Chapel exercises would be students to Hell. Agile students, and get what you want—only don't consider Mailbug suggestions like the one presented at the last student body meeting.

Another good reform would be to make candi dates come out of hiding during their campaigns. It is always a mystery to whom a candidate is running, and occasionally to whom a candidate is running to. Probably a few apaches by leading candidates would completely clear up the muddle—and this is the very reason why the reform will never be introduced, for you students aren't even able to sense if the "bosses" have been in there. At the University of Lowa, candidates advertise in the campus paper, which is only a four page edition. Of course they pay for it. But the students know who for whom they are voting?

"Depression Babies"
In a few weeks some five hundred graduates are stepping into what they hope is a receptive world, bearing the degrees of this University, and carrying with them the various curricu lum in which they are entered. It is worthy of comment that they have passed through a singularly interesting time of study. They entered the University in the year 1930, the world was on the point of reaching the abysmal depths of depression. Throughout their years they have contended through the depths of depression, hampered a little by the ef fects, no doubt, but at the same time learning a great lesson.

Those who have made a special study of the reasons and effects of present day conditions, have been afforded a magnificient experience. Those who have not been directly connected with such studies have still been able to observe what has been going on around them.

This great object lesson, learned in a time which is most adaptable for the assimilation of such lessons, you will not be forgotten. The students of this time, the "Depression Babies," have the knowl dge at their disposal to qualify their being true to this time and another any other with the qualification they have gained behind them. It should look on the future with the determination that they can be the ones to protect their common interest, their homes, and their health.

Human nature and real is always the same, but these graduates have a wealth of instruction and experience to temper those all too prevalent fail ings which are characteristic of such a time. It is our duty to wish them all success and happiness in their future lives. It is our duty to wish them all our great obli gations to their fellow creatures, through the world.

Miles Douglas

Co-Eds Create Dance Rules
By Pat Browne
For all that rules for being an admira table dance partner do not have to do with your past but are the conclusion drawn by a number of co-eds who attempted recently to draw up rules on dancing as describ ed by W. F.

These rules were instigated for the benefit of those younger brothers, and others who are just starting to be in

There are some of the interesting statements made by Dr. Patterson Wardlaw, Dean of the School of Education, in a lecture on the "Co-Eds in the University and Public Education," before members of the freshmen class Wednesday evening.

Wardlaw in discussing the problem of the coed as partner stated:
You can be sure of your past and you can be sure of your friends before the dance. That's the faith. It is my idea to have a crest to a dance. Or a double dance is a very satisfactory way.
A full bellissimo, who has had time to philosophize on the subject said:
"There are only two reasons why you should expect his date to dance with him all the time. First, if they are desperate in love, and this is not particular polite to the society of Both schools, speaking of the South Carolina College and the present Univer sity, are noted for the education of their students, their high standards, and the educational forces they turned out, according to Dr. Wardlaw. Citing the cases of several men, the lecturer pointed out the past change in education brought about by John J. Mc Mathes as State Superintendent of Education and George McCaffree as Dean of the School of Education, in a lecture on the "University and Public Education," before members of the freshmen class Wednesday evening.

Be sure that your date has not met one of your friends before the dance. She'll get started off right.
It is more fun to go with a crowd to a dance. Or a double dance is a very satisfactory way.
A full bellissimo, who has had time to philosophize on the subject said:
"There are only two reasons why you should expect his date to dance with him all the time. First, if they are desperate in love, and this is not particular polite to the society of

The Gamecock
April 27, 1934

Warlad Lectures On University In Education

"The man that ignores the past is lost on one side; the man that lives in the past is lost on the other.
"Don't think of the glory of the State as in the past.

"Our aim is to educate all the chil ren of all the people while the aim of the earlier schools was to educate a class.

There are some of the interesting statements made by Dr. Patterson Wardlaw, Dean of the School of Education, in a lecture on the "Co-Eds in the University and Public Education," before members of the freshmen class Wednesday evening.

Wardlaw in discussing the problem of the coed as partner stated:
"You can be sure of your past and you can be sure of your friends before the dance. That's the faith. It is my idea to have a crest to a dance. Or a double dance is a very satisfactory way.
A full bellissimo, who has had time to philosophize on the subject said:
"There are only two reasons why you should expect his date to dance with him all the time. First, if they are desperate in love, and this is not particular polite to the society of

This second, if he is a marvelous dancer—and sometimes a girl get ned of dancing with even the best.

So see to it that your date has ample attractive partners, but don't work over too far and if you were doing other.

For that party or that dance or for a quiet stroll on the bulbous-bulbous, we suggest special double-bobbin shadow and cost by Boyd Johnson in blue, or brown, or gray, with white or gray trousers, plain or striped. The money invested is slated as a comparison with the returns in complete self-satisfaction.

Boyd Johnson
No. 12 Road Bldg.
THOR, WHITEHIDES, Campus Representative

Special display of large samples next Tuesday and Wednesday, May 1st and 2nd. Be sure to attend this sale!

This Evening

For that party or that dance or for a quiet stroll on the bulbous-bulbous, we suggest smart double-bobbin shadow and cost by Boyd Johnson in blue, or brown, or gray, with white or gray trousers, plain or striped. The money invested is slated as a comparison with the returns in complete self-satisfaction.

Boyd Johnson
No. 12 Road Bldg.
THOR, WHITEHIDES, Campus Representative

Special display of large samples next Tuesday and Wednesday, May 1st and 2nd. Be sure to attend this sale!