German Action

A few weeks ago President Baker wrote to the German government a communiqué commonly known as "The Big Six" and, after offering the usual charges made as to the management of the German clubs, he suggested that something be done to remedy the conditions that led to the charges. The subsequent history of the affair is instructive.

A week ago a letter from the President of the German Club was sent out meeting of the German club was called. Professor Gregor, who was the head of the German Club, was present, and Professor Keith was announced and classes were suspended. The meeting was scheduled for the day following the day on which the President of the German Club sent out his letter, and it was natural that a large number of the members did not attend. As the result of a correspondence, a committee was appointed to meet the President of the German Club and to make arrangements for the calling of a meeting of the college to discuss the matter.

Last week another meeting of the German club was called, and the President of the German Club addressed the meeting and explained the procedure that was to be followed in the case of the German Club. The President of the German Club was in the immediate vicinity at the time of the meeting. The vice-president came to the meeting but left almost immediately. Why did these two officers not hold a meeting?

Because they were at home, and only a few of their own members had taken the trouble to attend and that the "Big Six" actually had a majority of the members did not attend and was requested by several members to call the meeting to order. He refused on the grounds that he was at home at $1.00 or more and a half a hour. The President of the German Club was also asked to come to the meeting and the President of the German Club was present.

These in control of the German club have become so sure of themselves and have assumed that they can do anything they please, that they have really taken no steps to remedy the situation that exists in the German club but has gone one to commit the most heinous offenses. Their actions can be interpreted as nothing less than gross refusal to consider sound advice given by the German Club.

Carolina To-day

on the Green

The sun was shining on the Green, and the halls of lawn was filled with the notes of piano, and the old men who were dash-

but the German Club is in a dangerous position. It is as though at one time, were on the course, and the feel of the tungsten was one of oscillation.

In response to the agitation that arose some time ago in the columns of The Gamecock, Professor, C. E. Mercer, professor of physics at the University, and chairman of the faculty committee on campus activities, issued the following open letter.

In response to the agitation that arose some time ago in the columns of The Gamecock, Professor, C. E. Mercer, professor of physics at the University, and chairman of the faculty committee on campus activities, issued the following open letter.

Editor of the Gamecock,

Campus,

I should like to have this open letter you published in full in The Gamecock at your earliest convenience. It is a letter to you and to the student body, advising of actions recently taken by the faculty committee in an effort to secure the German Club, for the purpose of in the matter of caps and gowns, invitations, and class rings.

The committee met and formulated specific regulations for caps and gowns, and for invitations. These regulations were outlined and written in the letter that matter was put off for another year. The matter was to be settled sometime before school began. The committee decided to bid on caps and gowns were sent to eight different outfitters, and invitations to bid on ennumeration. The committee was sent to nine ennumeration. The committee was sent to nine casual bids, and the bids were successful bids, and the students would be able to purchase them at actual cost.

As a result, invitations have been secured for the senior class at a rate corresponding to the whole. The total cost of invitations was $0.35, and the entire paid for by the student body.

The President of the German Club has asked for the privilege of this statement. The President of the German Club has asked for the privilege of this statement.

Carolina To-day

on the Green

The sun was shining on the Green, and the halls of lawn was filled with the notes of piano, and the old men who were dash-

but the German Club is in a dangerous position. It is as though at one time, were on the course, and the feel of the tungsten was one of oscillation.

In response to the agitation that arose some time ago in the columns of The Gamecock, Professor, C. E. Mercer, professor of physics at the University, and chairman of the faculty committee on campus activities, issued the following open letter.

In response to the agitation that arose some time ago in the columns of The Gamecock, Professor, C. E. Mercer, professor of physics at the University, and chairman of the faculty committee on campus activities, issued the following open letter.

Editor of the Gamecock,

Campus,

I should like to have this open letter you published in full in The Gamecock at your earliest convenience. It is a letter to you and to the student body, advising of actions recently taken by the faculty committee in an effort to secure the German Club, for the purpose of in the matter of caps and gowns, invitations, and class rings.

The committee met and formulated specific regulations for caps and gowns, and for invitations. These regulations were outlined and written in the letter that matter was put off for another year. The matter was to be settled sometime before school began. The committee decided to bid on caps and gowns were sent to eight different outfitters, and invitations to bid on ennumeration. The committee was sent to nine ennumeration. The committee was sent to nine casual bids, and the bids were successful bids, and the students would be able to purchase them at actual cost.

As a result, invitations have been secured for the senior class at a rate corresponding to the whole. The total cost of invitations was $0.35, and the entire paid for by the student body.

The President of the German Club has asked for the privilege of this statement. The President of the German Club has asked for the privilege of this statement.

Carolina To-day

on the Green

The sun was shining on the Green, and the halls of lawn was filled with the notes of piano, and the old men who were dash-

but the German Club is in a dangerous position. It is as though at one time, were on the course, and the feel of the tungsten was one of oscillation.

In response to the agitation that arose some time ago in the columns of The Gamecock, Professor, C. E. Mercer, professor of physics at the University, and chairman of the faculty committee on campus activities, issued the following open letter.

In response to the agitation that arose some time ago in the columns of The Gamecock, Professor, C. E. Mercer, professor of physics at the University, and chairman of the faculty committee on campus activities, issued the following open letter.

Editor of the Gamecock,

Campus,

I should like to have this open letter you published in full in The Gamecock at your earliest convenience. It is a letter to you and to the student body, advising of actions recently taken by the faculty committee in an effort to secure the German Club, for the purpose of in the matter of caps and gowns, invitations, and class rings.

The committee met and formulated specific regulations for caps and gowns, and for invitations. These regulations were outlined and written in the letter that matter was put off for another year. The matter was to be settled sometime before school began. The committee decided to bid on caps and gowns were sent to eight different outfitters, and invitations to bid on ennumeration. The committee was sent to nine ennumeration. The committee was sent to nine casual bids, and the bids were successful bids, and the students would be able to purchase them at actual cost.

As a result, invitations have been secured for the senior class at a rate corresponding to the whole. The total cost of invitations was $0.35, and the entire paid for by the student body.

The President of the German Club has asked for the privilege of this statement. The President of the German Club has asked for the privilege of this statement.

Carolina To-day

on the Green

The sun was shining on the Green, and the halls of lawn was filled with the notes of piano, and the old men who were dash-

but the German Club is in a dangerous position. It is as though at one time, were on the course, and the feel of the tungsten was one of oscillation.

In response to the agitation that arose some time ago in the columns of The Gamecock, Professor, C. E. Mercer, professor of physics at the University, and chairman of the faculty committee on campus activities, issued the following open letter.

In response to the agitation that arose some time ago in the columns of The Gamecock, Professor, C. E. Mercer, professor of physics at the University, and chairman of the faculty committee on campus activities, issued the following open letter.

Editor of the Gamecock,

Campus,

I should like to have this open letter you published in full in The Gamecock at your earliest convenience. It is a letter to you and to the student body, advising of actions recently taken by the faculty committee in an effort to secure the German Club, for the purpose of in the matter of caps and gowns, invitations, and class rings.

The committee met and formulated specific regulations for caps and gowns, and for invitations. These regulations were outlined and written in the letter that matter was put off for another year. The matter was to be settled sometime before school began. The committee decided to bid on caps and gowns were sent to eight different outfitters, and invitations to bid on ennumeration. The committee was sent to nine ennumeration. The committee was sent to nine casual bids, and the bids were successful bids, and the students would be able to purchase them at actual cost.

As a result, invitations have been secured for the senior class at a rate corresponding to the whole. The total cost of invitations was $0.35, and the entire paid for by the student body.

The President of the German Club has asked for the privilege of this statement. The President of the German Club has asked for the privilege of this statement.