Great Stories
In Morris Dam

Journalism Professor thinks project has not received enough publicity.

"Morris dam is one of America’s greatest news stories," according to J. Ben McKissick, professor of journalism, as quoted in the Knoxville Journal.

After returning from a tour of the dam, Mr. McKissick said that the new completed million-dollar project has not received enough publicity.

"The average newspaper reader knows it is rather vaguely as a huge power project, I think that proper publicity should probably be given to this and similar social results that will practically never receive attention as they deserve,” he said.

"It is vastly impressive, not only in its magnitude, but in its public service significance as well."

Approximately 50 people who lived outside of Columbia, the state of South Carolina, and the United States, visited the historic University Library during the summer months. Excepting South Carolina, ten other states were represented on the register of the library, as well as one foreign representation from Japan. The states represented were Florida, Georgia, Kentucky, Virginia, New Jersey, Alabama, New York, Texas, Oregon and Tennessee.

Eunice Shindra, who represents the Japanese government, was an exchange student to the United States, and visited Columbia to the public in the Fine Art Museum and the Shandon Baptist churches. She was much impressed by the size of the library and he declared it to be "unique."

Duncan D. McColl of Lexington, author of a history of Mathews County, was among those visiting the library, as was Dr. F. A. G. Harleman and Frances McColl. Mrs. H. G. Murray, a librarian of Walker’s self-service library, is studying the library's official catalog for the British Museum, and the Title Index for the University of Virginia, with the assistance of the Women's Auxiliary of P.E.U.; R. A. J. Le Roy, C. J. B. C. and S. Morses Questors, Hamburgh, Library of Congress.

Among the visitors in the spring were Mrs. E. W. Millard, granddaughter of Francis L. B. Millard, and Mrs. H. C. S. A. Millard, and Miss Aline S. Alford, granddaughter of the late Mr. Millard.

Dr. Morse Tells D. A. R. of Money And larvae Lost In Struggle

The war was不出予想 to be flt by Dr. Joseph Morse, as is addressed to the Daughters of the American Revolution in a recent meeting.

The "war of waste" can be reckoned only in dollars and lives destroyed, but we must now take into account the millions of lives that were permitted to be herd, he declared.

According to Dr. Morse, we would have ten million more families added to the numbers and twice as large a war had the war not occurred.

If this waste continues, the world will be plunged into depression and chaos, he concluded.

Massachusetts Institute of Technology has grouped those who contribute to the financial support into an organization called Research Associates of M. I. T.
