A controversy revolved recently by one of the student groups on the University campus has resulted in much written comment mainly as a result of not having a chance to present their views. In order to get a cross section of the feeling of the student body we are printing a balloting on the question of segregation:

Southfield, Ind.--(U-P-I) University of Notre Dame said today that the custodian force was removed from its dormitory buildings. In announcing the new plan, David H. 2. To clean dormitory bathrooms.
3. To organize a cleaning crew.
4. To request that meals be served early.
5. To request that the dormitory building be unlocked earlier.

The custodian force was removed from the dormitory buildings because it was found that the students were capable of doing the cleaning themselves. The custodians were removed and minor repairs were made to the building, according to the university.

GUS MANOS

Non-Segregation Is Not Race-Mingling

(Ed Nat. This is the third in a series of articles on non-segregation, a peacful policy which has been reprinted in the local paper. The policy is being adopted in many schools and colleges around the country.

In any discussion of the issue of segregation the proponents of the policy argue that it is the only way to achieve racial harmony. If every policy which has been put forth a number of weeks ago has been proven to be successful and has been widely adopted and announced implicitly. They argue that it is the only way to achieve racial harmony. If every policy which has been put forth a number of weeks ago has been proven to be successful and has been widely adopted and announced implicitly.

It is important to consider the arguments of both sides and to make an informed decision on the matter. Some people argue that the only way to achieve racial harmony is to have separate facilities. Others argue that it is not necessary to have separate facilities and that the policy of non-segregation is the only way to achieve racial harmony.
