Company Builds Pipe Organ
For USC’s Rutledge Chapel

Construction of a custom-built two-manual pipe organ for Rutledge Chapel is underway at M. F. Moller (Organ Co, in Hagerty, Md. Construction of the 915-pipe organ began last July and will be completed in March 1967. Each part of the instrument, the windchest and the pipes are custom designed to meet the requirements of the chapel.

Robert V. Dorn, associate professor of music at USC, is in charge of the coordination with William D. Fichter Jr., of Charles N. C., a Moller representative, containing the manuals and stops will be located in the one-story building. Organ pipes will range in length from two inches to 16 feet and will vary in circumference, thickness and materials used. Seven pipes will be made of aged wood and others of a combination of zinc, tin and lead.

Official Mace To Be Used In Dedication

Carolina’s ceremonial mace will be brought out of storage on Monday, the 16th day of the dedication of the Physical Sciences Center. The mace, since its adoption in a formal ceremony last April, has been used in two major functions, the June and August commencement exercises.

According to George Curry, associate vice president for planning resources, the use of the “Mace” will be the first and only one used in the dedication. It will be displayed at all of the mace’s functions along with a provisional condition to be worn by President Jones and his successors.

Russell Gives $20,000
For Endowment Fund

U. S. District Judge Donald Russell has made a gift of more than $20,000 to the University of South Carolina in the form of an endowment fund.

The fund will be administered through the Educational Foundation of the Department of History and Economics, S. C. Russell and the law fund at USC, according to R. T. McWilliams, USC president.

Jeffrey Russell, son of Mr. and Mrs. Russell, president of the University of South Carolina, will be the first beneficiary of the fund.

Twenty new foreign students have joined the ranks of Carolina undergraduate enrolls this fall. A total of approximately 80 foreign students are enrolled.

Indian students, 14 of them, comprise the largest number from a foreign country on campus.

Ist Warwich (English) exchange students are enrolled for the fall semester.

South American countries represented on campus include Venezuela, Columbia and Panama. Other countries include Greece, Australia, China, Arabia and Syria.

The majority of the foreign students here for studies in a way, science or engineering, have been doing differently with their English courses," according to Ted Loden, USC foreign student advisor. "As this year English course was started for foreign students to cope with their special problems."

With the hope of increasing exchange in areas among students of foreign countries, the International Students Club has been established. It is open not only to foreign students, but also to any student interested in meeting other students who speak different languages, enjoying the different cultures of the foreign students.
