Students now can improve their skills

Any student who needs to improve his study or reading skills should contact the Communication Skills Development Center (CSDC). The main emphasis in this program is to help the student in his individual weakness. They cover all communication problems, such as speaking, reading studying, concentrating, listening and have added note-taking. If the student feels he is weak in any of these areas he should look into this project.

CSDC is located on the second floor of the Pendleton Building. Mrs. Lila Bruckner, co-ordinator said, "Come to the building and see for yourself, but it would be best to call (5523) and ask for an appointment.

There are schedules for group classes of which some are two hours, once a week. This is the least amount of practice a student should have to effectively conquer his weakness. They also have individual studies with experts and up-to-date equipment, which makes the learning more interesting and effective. The center is already in contact with 130 students. Each student pays $5.00 for lab work which lasts for just six weeks, with noticeable advances, Mrs. Bruckner explained.

They would also like to set up projects with specific groups like athletes and lawyers and define their needs. They are prepared to help faculty and staff members also.

Foreign students take advantage of this project. It will help any student increase his effectiveness in communication, the staff explained.

CSDC is run completely by students. They are working hard to get pamphlets out to the faculty and students.

Married Students hold dance

A football dinner-dance for the USC married students will be held at the National Guard Armory on Bluff Road for the Virginia-Carolina game on Oct. 9. There will be a pre-game barbecue dinner and concert and a post-game dance with music provided by "Second Nature."

Admission will be by tickets that will be on sale Oct. 4-8 in Room 202 of the Russell House. The price is $1.00 per couple which must be purchased in advance and includes parking, dinner, set-ups, snacks and a dance. To park, show ticket at entrance to Armory parking lot. The nursery will be available, but reservations must be made in advance.
