Carolina will soon forget Joyce’s extraordinary leap on a jump-ball over 6-10 Lee Dedmon of rival North Carolina which USC converted into the winning basket.

The credentials of Joyce are too numerous to list. It seems enough to say that he has to be everyone’s All-America choice at guard and his career here at Carolina will prove to say the least, great.

The crowd yelled loudly for Joyce at player introductions and later when his jersey was retired. But perhaps the best tribute the home audience gave Joyce, as well as his fellow senior teammates Danny Traynor and Casey Manning, was their ovation at a time when it wasn’t called for.

Nobody is expected to yell that loudly several minutes before the end of a game, but when a crowd chooses to do it on their own, well that is a tribute to the performers.

But it was a tribute well deserved and in a sense, when one is losing a player like Joyce, it too could be expected.
