USC Foundation

Gets New Head

Darlington attorney Paul A. Sansbury has been elected president of the University of South Carolina Educational Foundation for a two-year term.

Sansbury received his bachelor and law degrees from USC, and has been a member of the board of the University’s Educational Foundation since its inception in 1955 and also served as president of the USC Alumni Association in 1955-56.

A former state representative from Darlington County, Sansbury has held the office of president of the Darlington County Bar Association, the Darlington Kiwanis Club and the State Municipal Attorneys Association. He succeeds Columbia attorney Charles W. Knowlton as president of the USC Foundation.

USC’s Department of Geography will conduct a seminar institute for South Carolina teachers of geography and social studies this summer.

The institute will run from June 3 to July 5, and participants will be enrolled for six semester hours. Participants will receive a stipend and paid tuition and fees.

Thirty participants will be chosen from school districts which have given evidence of willingness to utilize parts of the High School Geography Project materials in the curriculum.

Dr. Richard G. Silvernail of the Geography Department is the director of the institute, which is being paid for by a $55,001 grant from the National Science Foundation.

Persons interested in participating in the seminar may contact Dr. Silvernail.

“Effective Listening” classes will be offered by the University of South Carolina Division of Educational Services Thursday evenings March 28-Apr. 18 from 7:30-9:30 p.m.

Tuition for the four classes is $16 per person and further information on the short course may be obtained from the Division of Educational Services.
