Afro’s funding frozen

as asking these organizations to “make a very conservative estimate” in the future. He said it would be better if these groups wound up in the black at the end of the year rather than in the red.

Putnam said the funds to Afro would remain “frozen” until Afro submitted a revised budget. He made no estimation as to how long this might take, and said that it was basically up to Afro.

SAC is not really looking for anything particular in a revised budget, Putnam said; just to see if they had corrected their mistakes and to see if they realized their own mistakes in the present budget.

One senator asked if any more campus organizations were to be investigated.

Candidate Perry visits campus

PUTNAM

Putnam responded by saying he thinks “definitely so.” He said he had a few organizations in mind, but did not mention them because he said he was not sure which ones.

As for any problem resulting from Afro’s membership policies, the USC chartering commission has ruled that the terms of the groups charter have not been violated.

BY BILL PRATT

The creation of public service jobs would serve as a temporary curb on inflation, congressional candidate Mathew Perry said Tuesday.

“Right now, public service jobs would serve as a temporary relief,” Perry said, “Not as a permanent answer, but a temporary one.”

As to more permanent solutions, Perry said a re-examination of the military budget is in order. “I think, we should re-examine the military budget,” he said, “and, change it to encourage domestic needs.”

“We can limit the assistance we give to other nations,” Perry said.

Korea, he said, is an example of where the military should cutback. “There is no treaty agreement that calls for troops in Korea,” Perry said. “It costs,” he continued, “$7 billion a year to keep them there. The business of policing the world is something we should re-examine.”

Perry said At the same time, he said, he does not know exactly what is needed.

Perry said he was unsure about the nomination of Nelson Rockefeller to the vice presidency. “Right now,” he said, “I just don’t know how I would vote.”

At first, Perry was pleased, but recent revelations about Rockefeller have changed his mind.

Perry took time to criticize his opponent, Floyd Spence, during an informal talk, to about 50 USC students Tuesday.

“My opponent is running mostly on the issue of seniority,” Perry said. “Spence says one must have seniority to any good (in Congress).”

“My answer,” he said, “‘is the measure of one’s effectiveness in government. The measure is not how long but in terms of the quality of time in service,” he said.

Fassolas (lebanese string bean stew), Quinoa (Indian), and Mousse au Chocolat (French dessert) will be provided. Tickets for the banquet may be purchased in the Russell House Lobby at $2.50 for students and $3.50 for non-students.

Are you looking for her, too? You do it every day-- in class, walking around campus or wherever. We're trying to help you find that little sexpot you've been dreaming about all this time.

For the second consecutive year, the Carolina Men magazine of USC's GARNET & BLACK yearbook has launched its search for the G&B Plamate of the year. And this year, we're going all out. Here are the guidelines:

1- The 1975 G&B Plamate will receive rather extensive coverage in the 1975 GARNET & BLACK. She must be willing to pose semi-nude for a photographer acquired by the yearbook staff.

2- The winner of the contest will receive a gift certificate in the amount of $100.00 from one of the reputable Columbia stores (such as Sam Solomon Co.). In the event of sponsorship by a campus organization, the winner and the organization will each receive a $50.00 gift certificate.

3- Girls entered in the contest must be full-time female students at the University of South Carolina main campus. Entries will be accepted from USC organizations and from interested individuals. There is no entry fee for the contest.

4- Entries must include the name and phone number of the girl and, if sponsored by an organization, the name and phone number of the organization. Entries must be accompanied by a full-length photograph of the girl, color or black-and-white, at least 5x7 in size. If no such photograph is available, the GARNET & BLACK will acquire a photographer to take one at no charge.

5- The choice of the 1975 Plamate will be a decision of the editorial staff of the GARNET & BLACK.

6- No entries will be accepted after November 8, 1974.
