Well, goodbye, Dali

By TOMMY JOYNER

As part of a three-art exhibit at the Figueras, Spain, at 10:15 a.m. Monday, one of the greatest avant-garde artists of the last century will shed light on one of his own masterpieces — Salvador Dali's great, 1931 portrait of his wife, Gala. The painting, which is currently on display at the Guggenheim Museum in New York City, is expected to draw crowds to the museum for a closer look at the work of the artist who was also known for his flamboyant behavior.

Dali, who was born in Figueras, Spain, on May 11, 1904, was a member of the Dada movement and is known for his surrealistic paintings. He was also famous for his eccentric behavior, including wearing a large, flowing coat and a hat made of flowers.

The painting, titled "The Portrait of Gala," will be on display at the museum from March 16 through May 12. The exhibit includes works by other artists who were contemporaries of Dali, such as Max Ernst and Man Ray.

Dali's work is characterized by its dreamlike quality and its use of everyday objects in a surreal context. His paintings often feature bizarre, floating objects and distorted figures, and his works have been described as both disturbing and beautiful.

The exhibit is part of the museum's ongoing celebration of modern art, and is expected to draw large crowds. The Guggenheim Museum is located at 1071 Fifth Avenue in New York City, and is open daily from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. Admission is $20 for adults, $15 for seniors, and $10 for students and children.
